At Pittsburgh-Rain. CHICAGO, S; NEW YORK, 2.

Curcaso, May 28.—The cold winds didn't cease blowing to-day, and the New Yorks felt the effects of them. They came to the grounds prepared to play ball, and for six innings they made the cranks sick with envy. It looked as though they wouldn't give the colts a single chance at revenge, and even the kickers felt that the visitors were going away with a rec-ord of three straight victories from Anson's proud boys. During these six innings. The New Yorks played a flawless game. everything was perfect, and the batting was not to be sneered at, considering that Hutchison was pitching with all the skill and weirdness of an Egyptian magician. Skilful work with the hickory had brought in two hard carned runs, and the error column was as un-sulled as the newly-washed white suits of the Ruste was bidding fair to keep up with the tore, although he pitched some wild balls, and not a single blemish clouded the horizon of the visitors' future. But, alas! for human skill and human endeavor. Some demon from the lake must have cast his spell over the New York loys in the seventh inning. He entered into the soul of the usually faithful Glasscock, and made him prance about as if possessed. His fingers became useless and let the ball pass through, while his arm got restless and sent the sphere wildly. Two costly errors were brought about in this way, and Bassett added brought about in this way, and Bassett added two more.

In that unfortunate inning the Chicages were enabled to the and pass the hitherto victorious New Yorks, whereas at no other time did they make a run. It pleased the crowd, of course, but it seemed a pity that with two runs to their credit the visitors should allow three runs to be scored by their opponents.

Busic undoubtedly was a little rattled in this inning at the harsh decisions of the umpire, but that was no excuse for the shortcomings of Bassett and Glasscock. Even reliable Roger Connor let one ball pass him, and, although it was badly thrown from third, and the error was not put down against him, he should have seen red the ball. As the New Yorks began to play loosely the colts began to improve, and in the last part of the game no chance was lost by them.

The game itself was one of the prettiest played on the home grounds this season. The solt fielded perfectly. Anson's running catch of Tiernan's foul fiv, which fell near the grand stand, was loudly applauded, but the heatest play of all happened in the ninth, when Returdge ran into the grand stand and literally pulled Basset's foul off the netting and shot it straight as a rife ball from where he stood into Pfeffer's mitts, thus completing a long-range double play.

The New Yorks started in with a run in the first on Richardson's hit. Tiernan's base on balls, Connor's out, and Glassock's base drive. In the third another run came in on singles by Bassett, Russe, and Gore, and Buckley's sacrifice. Hutchison struck out only three men, but he retired Connor and Glassock, two dangerous hitters, in the eighth and put a quietus on Buckley in the ninth. The score:

CLEVELAND, 4: BROOKLYN, 3.

CLEVELAND, May 28 .- "Why don't you felers rent an office on Wall street?" shouted Burns at the conclusion of the game to-day. He was addressing his remarks to the Cleveluck you would break all the banks in New York in two days. You ought to buy lottery tickets and make $50,000 aplece." And then. picked up his bat bag, swung it over his shoulder, and walked out of the grounds to the omnibus outside, muttering to himself at every

It is quite true that the Cleveland Club was lucky, and the old horseshoes will all be touched up with a fresh coating of new gilt while they are away for the next two weeks on their eastern travels. It escapes the recollection of the local inhabitant when two base his over won a Loague game, but they certainly did it won a League game, but they certainly did it to-day. The local men bunched their enormous acquisition of two in one inning, and at the same time Hub Collins kindly bunched two of his quariet of errors along with them, and that is how the game came to belong to Cleveland.

In the mean time the brawny farmer boy from cestral Ohio was tossing curves, and a speedy ball that the Brooklyns could not hit athough ward's eam came very near making a garrison finish in the ninth inning, so near, in fact, that the spectators hung to their sears with bated breath, and exploded in excited cheering whenever a Brooklyn man went down.

cheering whenever a Brooklyn man went down.

The visitors needed but one to tie and two to win in the ninth. Foutz was the first batter, and pounded a hit at McKean that carried the short step off his feet. He recovered himself and made a bad throw. Virtue dug the healt out of the ground and Foutz was out by six feet. Then Burns hit the ball down to the fence for two bases. He wanted three, but filest-footed McAleer is sub tim at second. Doyle, with both hands stretched over the railing along the bleacheries, pulled down O'Brien's foul amid wild sheering. Pinkney got a base on balls and Burns stole third. Pinkney stole second. A base hit meant the loss of the game to Gleveland. Con Daily hit an easy grounder to foung. The big farmer, in his anxiety to put the man out, threw wildly, but Virtue made a wonderful catch and the game was over. The score:

The Fordham Colored boys yelled themselves house at the close of yesterday's game at Fordham, for the home players had defeated the Cornell College beam after a most stubbornly played game. Fordham College has a great lot of ball players this season, they defeating the University of Fennsylvania at Philadelphia and playing a twelve-liming die same with Lafayetta. The game was exciting and many pretty plays resulted. In the first inning, with three men on bases for the Fordhama the side was retired on a clever deathy play. DEAR SIRS: I am very gied to hear from you that you have sent out for some more of your small-headed rackets. You must send me on some as soon as they arrive. I have used them new for two years and have never liked a racket as wall. The stringing I think wonderful. Two rackets have lasted me two years and not a single new string has been put in, nor have either of my rackets warped. I hope and trust that they will have a good sale in this country, such as they deserve and if yes seel that my recommendation will be of any Very truly yours,
